The future of work is employee wellbeing

In the long term, workplace wellbeing can make or break a business. When employees feel overworked, tired or undervalued, they become disengaged and deliver poor quality work.

On the other hand, employees who feel happy, healthy and supported perform at their best, are more motivated and provide better results.

What is fitwel?

In business to do business

The RO has a 30 year history of investing and developing in Milton Keynes. The location has held a longstanding appeal for us, with easy access to London, Oxford and Cambridge.

The city is set to benefit from improved rail connections to Oxford and Cambridge and combined with its commitment to sustainability, the appeal is significantly enhanced.

We are excited to be bringing forward this scheme in Milton Keynes that prioritises sustainability in all aspects, from design to operation.

As a business with a 90-year history, we have seen many evolutions in the economic landscape, and we believe that we are in the midst of the biggest one yet. This has resulted in a radical adjustment not only in our approach to development but also our activity at a wider Group level. At all times we are striving to remain conscious of environmental and social issues to create value for all stakeholders.

We are proud to be leading the way in providing Milton Keynes' most sustainable office building in a city that shares our commitment to making the necessary changes to preserve our planet's future.
